Santa to Visit Tarlton Tonight

Monday night will be whoopee in Tarlton for the kiddies and the townspeople. Santa will be there to give out presents to the children. The celebration is a little late for Christmas but for Tarlton it will be a great time.

The community tree, located in the park has been decorated by the people of the town and candy, popcorn, and nuts will be distributed.

Tarlton never cuts a tree for this celebration as a beautiful evergreen grows right in the park and the only things needed are "trimmin's" to convert it into a beautiful symbol of Christmas.

FORD'S PLANS ARE CHEERING

Detroit Enthusiastic Over Flivver King's Promise To Hire 30,000 Men.

DETROIT, Dec. 31— Although tempered with the statement local unemployed men will be given preference, announcement by the Ford Motor Co., today that 30,000 new men will be hired before March 1, brought optimism to Detroit business and civic leaders, the new employes will increase Ford production by 20 per cent.

Thomas E. Dolan, general superintendent of the city's public welfare department said the warning for unemployed to stay away from Detroit could not be over emphasized.

Under the present Ford working plans the Ford output for a five day week averages 23,500 cars weekly. The new working plan will bring the schedule to 40,- [illegible] cars weekly.

Only the Detroit plants are affected by the new order, but the plan is expected to be extended to other [illegible] soon. For months Ford production experts have worked on the problem of increasing Ford production but adhering to Henry Ford's idea that his employes should work only five days weekly, and then new plan is [illegible].

Mrs. [illegible] Barwilliger is confined to the house by a case of grippe.

HULL CALLS FOR BATTLE ON TARIFFS

Import Charges Must Be Lowered to Preserve Economic Future, He Says.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—An inter-party tariff battle which will last through most of 1929 was assured today by the action of Rep. Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, former Democratic national chairman, in calling his party to battle for a downward revision of high protective tariffs.

Hull issued a statement predicting a disastrous economic future, internationally and domestically, for the United States, especially if the Republicans raise tariffs generally as advocated by some leaders. This is a departure from the position taken by Governor Smith in his campaign.

HEADS COMMITTEE

In his position on the ways and means committee, which will start hearings a week from today on tariff schedules, Hull will be in a position to lead the fight against the Republican measure which Chairman Hawley plans to have ready in April for the anticipated Hoover extra session of congress.

Hull struck at the Republicans, Chief Tariff Thesis, in a passage asserting that increased tariffs on farm products,—held to be necessary for farm relief by the majority party,—will really injure the farmers more than it will help them.

New and changed post war conditions demand foreign markets rather than excessive tariff protection, he said, characterizing present rates as too high. This contradicts the stand made during the campaign by Smith, who advocated what he called a competitive tariff and promised to give the farmer protection as well as industry.

INCREASE SMALLER

Hull analyzed the increases in foreign trade since the Republicans enacted the Fordney-McCumber tariff in 1922. The increases have not been as large proportionately as htey were before 1922, he said. And the exports have been paid for with great amounts of American money, much of which has been injudiciously loaned, he added.

"American economic policy can no longer ignore the fact that since 1914 we have changed from a debtor and small-surplus nation to the greatest creditor and actual or potential surplus-producing nation in the world, that, due, not to tariffs, but to our superior labor, machinery, horsepower, and to mass production, we maintain higher wages and living standards and lower production costs in an increasing number of industries, than any other country," Hull said.

DEATH TAKES MRS. THARP

Wife of Williamsport Resident Succumbs After Paralytic Stroke.

Mrs. Louise Tharp, 66, wife of Asa J. Tharp, Williamsport, O., died at her home Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, following a paralytic stroke suffered several weeks ago.

She was the daughter of William E. Turner and wife and was born at Rushville, in Fairfield-co, O., on March 11, 1862. She was twice married. Her former husband was John Thompson, who died in 1917. On Oct. 6, 1919, she was united in marriage to A. J. Tharp, who survives. One brother, S. H. Turner, of Worthington, O., also survives.

The funeral services were held at the residence Monday morning at 10 o'clock by Rev. Clellan, and interment was in Rushville cemetery by C. E. Hill, funeral director.

BAD FIRE AT WILMINGTON

Blaze Early Sunday Causes Damage Estimated At More Than $10,000.

WILMINGTON, Dec. 31.—Fire of unknown origin starting in the Miller meat market and grocery store early yesterday morning caused more than $10,000 damage and for more than an hour threatened to destroy part of the business district of the city.

It was discovered by two men returning home at 3 a. m., the blaze at that time having gained considerable headway. Dense smoke from burning paper, buckets, bags and mops filled the Faris fruit store. Elks club room, office of Dr. H. K. Bailey and Reynolds radio shop and caused considerable damage to stock in the Wall & Patterson department store.

The Miller building was swept by flames, the large stock of meats and groceries being destroyed. Part of the second floor crashed through. Ammonia tanks hampered firemen in their work.

The meat market was the scene of a blaze last August, also of unknown origin.

Chicago and New York To Open War On Liquor Traffic To Start New Year

Windy City Authorities Will Launch Campaign To Dry Up Their Town.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31—Celebrators polished and filled their flasks today for what the government prohibition department says will be the last New Year's eve in Chicago when such things will have any use.

Before 1929 has run its course, liquor will be hard to get here, was the New Year's promise of United State District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson. The drive to put a real dry lid on wet Chicago will start tonight, he continued.

Two hundred dry agents will don tuxedoes tonight and visit cafes, hotels and cabarets with orders to arrest violators of the Volstead act. Some of the agents will be accompanied by women operatives.

FOR SAKE OF CITY

"Prohibition for Chicago—not for prohibition's sake but for Chicago's," is Johnson's slogan.

"Illicit liquor supplies criminals with funds to corrupt politicians and officials," Johnson said. "Therefore we must eliminate illicit liquor."

One of the first steps in the campaign to clamp down the lid will be putting all minor liquor cases into the "racketeer court" a new division of municipal court.

There the government will prosecute minor liquor cases, relieving the docket of the federal courts and permitting prohibition agents to concentrate on large conspiracies and syndicates. State's Attorney John A. Swanson, elected on a platform to clean up Chicago, will put an assistant on the "racketeer court" and government agents will file their cases there.

SALOONS OBJECTIVE

Johnson said by leaving his office free from minor prosecutions he and his assistants would be in a position to hamper the liquor racketeers by taking the "easy money" out of the business.

Saloons will be the first objects of the drive, Johnson said, followed by a war on the distributors and then to climax the campaign, an attack on importers and [illegible] smugglers.

Whalen Directs Drive Against Speakeasies In Round-up of Criminals.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—The shrill blasts of police whistles will have a prominent place in the uproar tonight when New York shouts the old year out.

Commissioner Grover Whalen has announced he will continue his raids on "crime breeding" speakeasies, but will not molest night clubs. Since he neglected to specify just where his patrolmen would draw the line between night clubs and speakeasies, Broadway is prepared for anything.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE

To New Yorkers, a speakeasy is a place where you put your foot on the brass rail, salute the bartender, and drink a fair quality of rye whisky at 50 cents a "shot." A night club is a place where you sit at a table in a smoke-filled room and pay $1 a bottle for 25 cent ginger ale and in most cases provide your own liquor. Speakeasies usually are quiet: night clubs not only breed noise, they thrive on it.

Yesterday was the busiest Sunday the police department ever has had. By midnight 454 persons were in cells, seven of whom were wanted on homicide charges.

WHALEN ON DUTY

Most of the 454 suspects were seized in speakeasies which Whalen insists provide gathering places for criminals. Squads of police went through the five boroughs, entering doors through which no policeman had ever passed before unless he happened to be in search of a drink.

In the background, driving the policemen on, was the immaculate figure of Whalen who doesn't take off his morning coat and gardenia even when there is constabulary duty to be done. He stroked his cropped mustache carefully, passing a word of praise here and there as some patrolman reported the capture of a suspect for whom police had been searching for months.

ALIMONY ORDERED

Flora Isl Hulett, Circleville, was ordered by J. W. Allen, probate judge, to pay Grace Hulett, 58 per week alimony and ordered to pay for the coal necessary to heat her home.

19 DECKS SHIPPED

Nineteen decks of livestock were shipped through the Pickaway-co Livestock Co-operative association last week, according to records kept at the farm bureau office. Seven decks were shipped Saturday.

EX-AIDE OF CAPONE DIES IN GUN DUEL

Beer Runner and Pal Check Out In Dance Hall Battle —Slayer Captured.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Hugh "Stubby" McGovern, beer runner and former henchman of Al Capone, and William "Gunner" McFadden, 35, a pal of McGovern, were shot to death early today in the Granada cafe, famous south side night club.

George Mahoney was held in the shooting.

The two gangsters were dining and dancing in the night club with two other men and four women when a stranger approached their table and said a few words to McGovern.

Then the stranger drew a pistol and started shooting.

McGovern drew his gun and leaped to the south side of the room. McFadden whipped out his automatic and ran to the north side of the dance floor.

As they ran the stranger continued firing and the two gangsters replied. Suddenly McGovern sank to the floor with a bullet thru his heart. The stranger whirled and sent a bullet into McFadden's heart.

Police Sergt. Tim Sullivan was at the cigar counter when the shooting started. He dashed through the panic stricken crowd to the dance floor. He found Mahoney standing among the deserted tables with a pistol in his hand.

Mahoney, who was not immediately identified as an enemy of McGovern or McFadden, offered no resistance and refused to answer questions.

There were 200 men and women in the cafe, when the shooting occurred. They scattered in panic when gun battle started and bullets began flying across the dance floor.

McGovern at one time was the chief lieutenant of Al Capone, gangland overlord of Chicago. Some of the beer business in the south side, however, had slipped from the control of Capone and Ralph Sheldon, another aide.

BREAKS WITH CAPONE

McGovern who broke with Capone and Sheldon has been in Arizona for his health, which allowed McGovern to enter a wedge in the south side beer racket. He had sworn undying enemity against Sheldon who he accused of shorting him of several thousand dollars weekly in the beer earnings.

McGovern was known here as a man who was not to be trifled with. He had the reputation of being "bad" and a number of killings have been traced to his activities, though none was laid directly to him. Several recent machine gunnings on the south side were attributed to efforts of his enemies to "get" McGovern.

FOES BLAMED IN KIDNAPING

Enemies of Orrville Marshal Believed to Have Abducted Missing Boy.

ORRVILLE, O., Dec. 31— Police today expressed the conviction that four-year-old Melvin Horst, who disappeared mysteriously four days ago, has been abducted by enemies of Marshal Roy Horst, the boy's uncle.

Marshall Horst has been active against bootlegging element here and Melvin may have been kidnapped in the belief that he was Horst's son, officers said.

A reward of $1500 has been posted for the return of the boy alive, but thus far police are without the remotest clew as to his whereabouts.

Four [illegible] said to have been connected with a local bootlegging ring, were questioned as to their whereabouts on the night Melvin dropped from sight, but they proved they were members of parties searching for the boy.

Saloons will be the first objects of the drive, Johnson said, followed by a war on the distributors and then to climax the campaign, an attack on manufacturers and smugglers.

Whalen Directs Drive Against Speakeasies In Round-up of Criminals.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—The shrill blasts of police whistles will have a prominent place in the uproar tonight when New York shouts the old year out.

Commissioner Grover Whalen has announced he will continue his raids on "crime breeding" speakeasies, but will not molest night clubs. Since he neglected to specify just where his patrolmen would draw the line between night clubs and speakeasies, Broadway is prepared for anything.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE

To New Yorkers, a speakeasy is a place wnere you put your foot on the brass rail, salute the bartender, and drink a fair quality of rye whisky at 50 cents a "shot." A night club is a place where you sit at a table in a smoke-filled room and pay $1 a bottle for 25 cent ginger ale and in most cases provide your own liquor. Speakeasies usually are quiet; night clubs not only breed noise, they thrive on it.

Yesterday was the busiest Sunday the police department ever has had. By midnight 454 persons were in cells, seven of whom were wanted on homicide charges.

WHALEN ON DUTY

Most of the 454 suspects were seized in speakeasies which Whalen insists provide gathering places for criminals. Squads of police went through the five boroughs, entering doors through which no policeman had ever passed before unless he happened to be in search of a drink.

In the background, driving the policemen on, was the immaculate figure of Whalen who doesn't take off his morning coat and gardenia even when there is constabulary duty to be done. He stroked his cropped mustache carefully, passing a word of praise here and there as some patrolman reported the capture of a suspect for whom police had been searching for months.

ALIMONY ORDERED

Herschel Hulett, Circleville, was ordered by J. W. Adkins, probate judge, to pay Grace Hulett, $8 per week alimony and ordered to pay for the coal necessary to heat her home.

19 DECKS SHIPPED

Nineteen decks of livestock were shipped through the Pickaway-co Livestock Co-operative association last week, according to records kept at the farm bureau office. Seven decks were shipped Saturday.

EX-AIDE OF CAPONE DIES IN GUN DUEL

Beer Runner and Pal Check Out In Dance Hall Battle —Slayer Captured.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Hugh "Stubby" McGovern, beer runner and former henchman of Al Capone, and William "Gunner" McFadden, 35, a pal of McGovern, were shot to death early today in the Granada cafe, famous south side night club.

George Mahoney was held in the shooting.

The two gangsters were dining and dancing in the night club with two other men and four women when a stranger approached their table and said a few words to McGovern.

Then the stranger drew a pistol and started shooting.

McGovern drew his gun and leaped to the south side of the room. McFadden whipped out his automatic and ran to the north side of the dance floor.

As they ran the stranger continued firing and the two gangsters replied. Suddenly McGovern sank to the floor with a bullet thru his heart. The stranger whirled and sent a bullet into McFadden's heart.

Police Sergt. Tim Sullivan was at the cigar counter when the shooting started. He dashed through the panic stricken crowd to the dance floor. He found Mahoney standing among the deserted tables with a pistol in his hand.

Mahoney, who was not immediately identified as an enemy of McGovern or McFadden, offered no resistance and refused to answer questions.

There were 200 men and women in the cafe, when the shooting occurred. They scattered in panic when gun battle started and bullets began flying across the dance floor.

McGovern at one time was the chief lieutenant of Al Capone, gangland overloard of Chicago. Some of the beer business in the south side, however, had slipped from the control of Capone and Ralph Sheldon, another aide.

BREAKS WITH CAPONE

McGovern who broke with Capone and Sheldon has been in Arizona for his health, which allowed McGovern to enter a wedge in the south side beer racket. He had sworn undying enemity against Sheldon who he accused of shorting him of several thousand dollars weekly in the beer earnings.

McGovern was known here as a man who was not to be trifled with. He had the reputation of being "bad" and a number of killings have been traced to his activities, though none was laid directly to him. Several recent machine gunnings on the south side were attributed to efforts of his enemies to "get" McGovern.

FOES BLAMED IN KIDNAPING

Enemies of Orrville Marshal Believed to Have Abducted Missing Boy.

ORRVILLE, O., Dec. 31— Police today expressed the conviction that four-year-old Melvin Horst, who disappeared mysteriously four days ago, has been abducted by enemies of Marshal Roy Horst, the boy's uncle.

Marshall Horst has been active against bootlegging element here and Melvin may have been kidnapped in the belief that he was Horst's son, officers said.

A reward of $1500 has been posted for the return of the boy alive, but thus far police are without the remotest clew as to his whereabouts.

Four men said to have been connected with a local bootlegging ring, were questioned as to their whereabouts on the night Melvin dropped from sight, but they proved they were members of parties searching for the boy.

CABBAGES and KINGS

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—
And cabbages—and kings—"
Lewis Carroll

THE MOTORIST

I met an ancient motorist,
His head was bending low,
His brow was furrowed deep with grief,
His eyes were dark with woe.
"Oh, Sir!" I cried, "Why is this thus,
Whence comes this parlous state?
Oh, rest your bean upon my breast
And let your hurts abate."

"My simpie-minded friend," he said,
I was one day like you,
A happy, brainless, joyous goof
I was not always blue."

"Oh, once I heard the birdies sing
Their sweet and clear refrain,
And he'ped with joyous caroling,
But now my life is pain."

"Oh, Sir," sez I, "How come, how come?
How met you such hap,
Oh, tell me why life seems so bum,
My ancient weary sap."

"Whyas to that" sezze with tears,
The saddest man alive,
"I kicked my home about my ears
When I taught my wife to drive."

"A sonsie gentle girl was she
A little queen, no less,
With every word she would agree
She smiled at each caress.

"When I blind fool, one time essayed
To track that jane the gears—
When I remember all she said
I break right into tears.

"Oh, once she was a placid wren,
But you should hear her rave,
She sports a disposition now
That no wildcat would have.

"Oh, woe is me and woe is me,
I trace life's greatest jar,
To that bitter day I tried to show
Her how to drive a car."

SMALL TOWN STUFF

Fads change, but the faddists remain the same. Thus the people who are most avid for the Bendola were once the most expert demonstrators of the tango, and the son of the man who was hedker expert becomes the final yelp at bridge The girl with the shortest skirts had a great grandmother who scandalized the community introducing the waltz from the mad, gay world of Syracuse, and the boy who scorns driving less that 80 miles an hour, had a grandfather who had the fastest little filly in the county.

The out-of-town boy, the good dresser with a lot of clothes and a big car, can step in and take amost any home boy's girl away from him. But if the home boy is patient he will get the girl back. Girls are much more practical and matter of fact than boys are, and when a girl gets married she looks ahead to little things like the grocery bill and an occasional winter coat. Girls marry for love, of course, but the right sort of girl is careful not to get in love with any boy who doesn't have a fairly good job and an embryonic bank account.

The richest man in town usually has the respect of most people—not because he is the richest man in town but because he is a hard worker and a big help to the community. Generally the richest man is also the most useful man in the place.

When a man becomes just a little important—when he had done something or inherited something or been thrust into something that makes for prominence, he is beset at once by a myriad call on his time and such talent or substance as he may possess by all sorts of unimportant people. He must make speeches on subjects of which he knows nothing, and knows his ignorance; he must take his place on committees for all sorts of vague movements; he must attain dull banquets, must sacrifice his time and strength and years to the furtherance of plans that were never worth devising. It is then that he begins to realize that the Bible meant when it spoke about the meek inheriting the earth.

Some girls took a drink of gin the other night, and of course it was wrong and of course they should have been spanked. What is the younger generation coming to? "Hoity, toity," said Grandmother, 'we girls served hot toddles in the winter. The girls are better behaved now than they were in my day — smarter and prettier and with a lot more common sense." But of course Grandmother is wrong.

The New Year's resolutions huddled close together. "We're pretty badly damaged, so worn out that we'd rather be cast into the distcard without a sigh or a tear but well we know we'll be patched up to use another year.

Studebaker announces a new and finer Commander at a still lower price

at the factory

THE world's first truly great motor car of moderate cost now becomes a car still finer . . . at a price still lower!

A new Commander by Studebaker, builder of champions! Worthy heir to the laurels of its gallant predecessor—The Commander which traveled 25,000 miles in less than 23,000 minutes. This record has never been successfully challenged save by Studebaker's great President Straight Eight!

By the worth of a score of betterments, this new Commander merits its heritage of honors. It is the greatest automobile ever built and sold at its price.

New Beauty · · New Comfort · · New Safety

Artists in coachcraft have deftly re-directed its excellent body lines into effects of arresting beauty. Body mouldings contribute to the look of length, of lowness, of eager speed. Color harmonies new to motordom, add to the new Commander's beauties, and enhance its graces.

The new Commander rides more easily—seats its passengers more comfortably—clings to the road at high speed even more steadily. New ball bearing spring shackles and larger hydraulic shock absorbers. Wider, deeper, softer cushions. A lower center of gravity. A safety steering wheel that cannot fail. Brakes silken-smooth yet powerful. Non-shatterable safety windshield.

Adding new fame to this famous car:

DOUBLE-DROP FRAME
WIDER DOORS
WIDER REAR SEAT
NEW, LONGER, LOWER LINES
NON-SHATTERABLE WINDSHIELD
ADJUSTABLE FRONT SEAT
SAFETY STEEL-CORE STEERING WHEEL
AUTOMATIC CHOKE CONTROL
BALL BEARING SPRING SHACKLES
HYDRAULIC SHOCK ABSORBERS

Never was Studebaker's engineering genius and unique One-Profit manufacture better exemplified. Never was Studebaker's 77-year-old tradition of manufacturing integrity entrusted more safely.

Here is a six-cylinder motor car utterly without peer in its price class, because it is faster, more enduring, more beautiful, more comfortable. It is a Studebaker and a champion. There are no finer motor car credentials than these.

C. A. C. FACES HARD CONTEST ON FIRST DAY

Ilion, N. Y., Basketball Squad Will Be Locals' Opponents Tuesday Night.

New Year's night the C. A. C. basketball team will again be opposed by a team that will no doubt try the locals' metal to the utmost when they take the floor against the basketball team representing Ilion, New York.

Without doubt the Ilion squad will be a real attraction due to the fact that the team is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Ilon and is on tour of the eastern and central states as a medium of advertising for the city of Ilon which is the home of the Remington Arms Works, the Remington Typewriter Co., the Remington Cash Register Co. and many other Remington products. Therefore it necessarily follows that a basketball team representing such widely known products would have the ability to hold up the reputation of the products represented. The team is made up of ex-college players of merit and will no doubt present an exhibition worth seeing

The C. A. C. squad feels yet the sting of defeat from Bliss College and has been hard at it getting into shape to retrieve some of its lost laurels.

The athletic club is at quite an expense in bringing this big attraction to Circleville and hopes for a capacity crowd.

And especially does the C. A. C. invite the local Chamber of Commerce to attend the game in a body and by its presence and cooperation add moral support to the fighting spirit of the C. A. C. quintet.

ROGERS IS STARRED

"Someone to Love," Charles (Buddy) Rogers' second starring picture for Paramount, will open at the Metropolitan theater Tuesday for a two days' run. This picture is winning instant success wherever it is shown and is reported to surpass in some respects the enjoyable love drama of college life, "Varsity," which opened Rogers' starring career.

Mary Brian, the leading lady of "Varsity," plays opposite the star again in this story of a music store salesman who falls in love with a wealthy girl and turns his talents and attentions to building up a failing girls' school. His efforts in this direction meet with success and he wins the girl as a result.

In "Varsity," the famous comedian Chester Conklin, had an important part and, in "Someone to Love," Rogers has the support of two other well-known comedians, Jack Oakie, who won instant success with Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In!" and William Austin, the great Character Englishman. James Kirkwood, the dramatic actor, is cast in this production.

"STREETS OF SHANGHAI"

Pauline Stark and Kenneth Harlan are starred at the Grand theater tonight in "Streets of Shanghai." It is an interesting and dramatic tale laid in the fascinating and mysterious city of Shanghai. It is the love idyll of a handsome Leatherneck and a pretty American teacher. A Universal comedy will also be shown.

MANY VISIT NEW GARAGE IN CITY

Few country people left Circleville Saturday without viewing the new building of the Harden-Stevenson Co., and walking into the specious show room to get a glimpse of the new Chevrolet Six, which is displayed for the first time in Circleville.

GOD'S ANNOINTED AND HIS TASK— To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn. WHEN DREAMS CRASH

A 25-year-old girl, teacher in the public schools at Champaign, Ill., killed herself with a rifle the other day, leaving for her parents a note in which she said that she was committing suicide because her life had been a failure. Since she had an excellent record as a teacher, and was popular with all her associates, her parents quite naturally could not understand why she felt that she had failed.

This matter of failure is entirely relative. The extent of your failure depends largely on the extent of the vision with which you began to work. If you only aspire to become a compete truck driver, for instance, you will be overjoyed when you actually get such a job. But if you aspire to become a bank president or a grand opera star, the truck driver's job, if you land in it, will seem very mean and unsatisfying.

Aspirations usually rise high, at the beginning. A youngster can put together a dream that takes in the entire earth. Nothing is more touching than the sublime confidence with which youth builds its air castles. A girl who hopes to be a singer is sure that she will outshine Galli-Curci and Homer. A boy who plans an army career knows he will eventually look on Napoleon and Lee as equals.

Yet the realization, almost always, falls leagues short of the goal. In every city and town there are forgotten, submerged men and women who once, far in the past, had a glimpse of sunlit heights and broad living. Indeed, all of us, to some extent, are in that class. Who has not, tucked away in the back of his mind a youthful vision of glory and mastery which now is quite faded and dead?

But most of us do not give way to despair and end our lives. We keep at it, doing what we are forced to do instead of what we would like to do, keeping our faded dreams as private secrets which we can inspect once in a while, but we know are only keepsakes of an earlier day.

How do we manage it? Why does not the sense of failure overcome us, as it did this girl school teacher, and drive us to desperation?

Probably it is because we come to realize, as we gain experience in living, that such a dream or vision is an end in itself. It has a value of its own, even if it is never translated into accomplishment. It is worth something to have had a look at the promised land, even if we never quite get there. Examining our long-lost youthful aspirations, we can say:

"Here, once, at any rate, I got a glimpse of what life might be. And because I know its possibilities, even if I haven't attained them, I know that it is noble and significant, and I know that I am not made entirely of the dust. If I have to live in the valleys, I at least know that there are hilltops where fresh winds ripple the grass and the trees cast inviting shadows in the sunlight. And that knowledge is as good as anything life can bring me."

So we overcome our own failures.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF AVIATION

A granite boulder has just been unveiled at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, marking the birthplace of aviation, where Orville Wright, the first man to fly successfully, performed this historic deed.

Formerly the world used to pay its warmest tributes to the great generals who fought successful wars. Today it is giving its warmest applause to the statesmen and scientists who promote human welfare. At the battlefield, man celebrates how he beat down his brothers, but at this historic spot in North Carolina, he celebrates how he made nature his servant for the good of all

Peaks of Desire

by Kane O'Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, reporter, falls in love with Ann Tremaine, wealthy debutante. He takes her to live at his boarding house, and introduces her to a new world. She is attracted to Steve Harrison, a husky young mechanic of whom Jerry is jealous. Ann gets a job in a small theatre owned by Nick Pagalos, and later asks her employer to hire Steve. One night Pagalos makes love to Ann, and in the battle which ensues between him and Steve, the Greek is made to realize his error. That night Steve confesses his love to Ann, and they embrace. Steve leaves his job to go into the trucking business. In the meantime Jerry Dunn returns from a trip and tells Ann he is no longer heartbroken over her. While they are chatting Maizie Thompson, an ex-sweetheart of Steve's, appears. She accuses Ann of having stolen Steve from her. Ann denies this, and Steve who has come in, says that he is no longer in love with Maizie. Maizie breaks into sobs and Ann and Steve leave her to be soothed by Jerry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

JERRY walked out into the hall with Steve and Ann. With the door closed behind them they agreed to leave the stricken girl in his charge. All fluency of speech had left Steve. "Me, I'm going to bed," he said dumbly and started up the stairs.

"If you're too sympathetic with her you'll only encourage her in her grief," Ann told him. "The poor thing. I feel sorry for her, but you being a man it's natural she'd impress you more. Be good to her, Jerry, but don't take her too seriously."

He was back in the room with Maizie and once they were alone together some soothing radiations of his sympathy began to quiet her. He turned out several lights until there was only the yellowish glow of a reading lamp on his table. Maizie sat up, straightened her hair and looked at him.

"You're a great guy," she said.

"Don't you ever believe it!" he smiled.

"You're a great guy and a good sport," she insisted intently. "You think I can't read between the lines? I know how that Ann stands with you. You're dippy about her, ain't you?"

Jerry's face became serious. "Do you mind if I tell you something very personal?" he asked.

"Shoot."

"Don't say 'ain't.' It's bad grammar. Don't say 'ain't you'— say 'aren't you.' You're too nice a girl to use such untidy language."

"You're smart, ain't—aren't you? You don't kid me any. This Ann, you are up to your neck in love with her and you don't a bat an eye about it. It kind of burns you up to see her falling for Steve, don't it?"

"Doesn't it."

"All right, you school teacher. Doesn't it?"

"The trouble with you, Mazie," he said with an amused smile on his lips, "is that you take everything too seriously. You imagine your own heart is broken and you imagine everybody else is suffering from the same complaint. You live in a world of romance and I suspect you get your ideas out of the movies. Why don't you come down to earth and find yourself?"

He found himself wondering how she would look in a trim, narrow tailored suit of the darkest blue—so dark that it was almost black. He could see her with a slick little cloche hat on her head, with the best of silk stockings and nice shoes. Not so much rouge, not so much mascara about the eyes—his mind played with the idea of a possible transformation. As long as she didn't speak and reveal her crudity it would be possible for her to get by almost any place. Behind her facade of hardness he could discern faintly the hint of a rather fragile and appealing charm. It was so easy to become romantic about girls and wonder what they really were like.

"What do you mean, find myself?" Maizie demanded. "You mean why I don't be like HER?"

"Oh, no. You're a different type. I imagine you think too much about being in love. Aren't there plenty of other things you can do?"

"Good God—plenty of things I can do!" Maizie laughed bitterly. "Listen, do you know I work eight hours every day in a canning factory? On my feet. What did you think I was doing—going around to afternoon teas like some society dame? Believe me, big boy, I ain't suffering from any lack of employment?"

"Do you live at home?"

"Yeah."

"Say yes."

"Yes. Say, are you trying to give me language lessons or what?"

"Steve said you're going around with a pretty bad bunch of people. What did he mean by that?"

The narrow shoulders drew up in a shrug. "Oh, just boys and girls that hang around dance halls and places like that." A lot of the girls are pretty tough, but I guess I'm old-fashioned. It's not a thing to brag about, and I guess even Steve don't believe it, but I happen to be good."

"A lot of these sheiks I used to know didn't exactly work for a living and maybe one or two of them happen to be boy bandits. I dunno. It was a pretty hot crowd."

"And you cut them out for Steve?"

"Absolutely."

"Why?"

"I dunno. I guess because I thought he was better than the rest of them. I thought he was right."

Jerry forgot for the moment her cheap finery and the frizzy hair. Indeed, he saw her not at all physically but was able to sense her futile strugglings with life. Feebly she was like a weed trying to be a flower. There was no use deceiving himself about her—humanly speaking she was still a weed. Perhaps, after a time, she would abandon the struggle and become reconciled to the common lot of her existence.

"It's done me a lot of good to talk to you," she said. "Me and another girl met some refined guys once before. They was college fellows but they got pretty fresh later on."

"I'm not going to get fresh with you," Jerry assured her.

"I know you're not. You ain't thinking about me at all—you're thinking about that other girl, that Ann. I guess she's a good scout at that in her own way. All the same, I'm glad I met you and somehow I don't feel quite as bad as I did."

Her company, surprising, was strangely agreeable. Jerry found himself actually interested in her. He glanced at her eyes and noted that the hardness had disappeared from them; she was uneducated, but there was somewhere within her a native intelligence.

"You ought to get Steve out of your mind," he told her. "I don't believe in giving good advice because it almost never works—but in your case it might help a bit if you'd try to take a tip. I don't mean you should go back to your old rowdy gang, but you'll only make yourself ridiculous if you bother about Steve. That's the surest way on earth to drive a man away from you."

"I used to admire him a lot.' Maizie said thoughtfully.

"You'd better forget that part of it, too."

"I used to admire him a lot," she repeated. "But I don't admire him as much as I did. You have a lot more stuff on the ball than Steve ever had or ever will have. At the same time, I don't think I could love a guy like you, like I could Steve."

Jerry was startled. For all his cynicism, his worldly experience as a newspaper reporter, he was constantly being surprised by women—by all women.

"Good heavens, girl! I don't want you to love me at all."

"I couldn't love you as much as I could a guy like Steve," she protested doggedly, "but I'll tell you this—I could think so much of you that it would be damn hard to tell it from love."

2 U. S. GENERALS SUCCUMB SUNDAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Two U. S. army generals, one retired, died here yesterday.

Gen. Lutz Wahl, adjutant general of the army, was a victim of pneumonia. Death of Brig. Gen. James Battlemurbank, retired, one of the few surviving officers of the Civil war, was announced a few hours after that of Wahl.

MOTHER IN JAIL; KIDDIES IN HOME

Margaret and Wilbur Murray, aged 5 and 10 years respectively, were taken to the Pickaway-co childrens' home Friday evening by Mrs. Carrie Patton, probation officer.

The children were brought to the court house by officers from Norwood, near Cincinnati, where the mother lived. The mother is said to be in jail. The parents of the children are divorced and the children were left homeless.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

AS the bells of Time "ring out the old—ring in the new" all of us pause for a moment to take stock of our affairs, our goods and ourselves; we revalue the progress of the old year and we should find our greatest pleasure in measuring our contribution toward the prosperity and happiness of our friends and the progress of our business, our community, state and nation. Then we turn to the future, encouraged and strengthened, to map our course for the year to come; to plan greater progress—in terms of service to mankind.

As individuals we do all this. Is it not conceivable then that a great railroad might do the same thing? It does.

Tangibly, the Norfolk and Western Railway takes stock of its materials and supplies, its equipment and property at the end of the year. It analyzes its relations with the public, patrons, shippers and other railroads. It reviews and revalues the progress of the old year. But the greatest satisfaction comes from measuring its contribution toward the prosperity and progress of the people, industries and territory it is permitted to serve.

The year 1928 has been one of accomplishment both for the railroad and those to whom it has furnished an unexcelled transportation service. Encouraged by this fact, the railroad, like the individual, turns to the future to map its course for the year to come; to plan progress—always in terms of service to mankind. And the greatest of the railway's hopes for the year to come is that it may bring the opportunity to contribute more than ever before to the accomplishments of industry and agriculture and to your happiness and success.

This, therefore, is a greeting—and a promise to continue to render that adequate, efficient transportation service upon which to-day's general prosperity is based.

The Norfolk and Western Railway and the members of the Norfolk and Western Family thank you for your patronage and your coöperation and express the sincere wish that the New Year will bring you every good.

GOD'S ANNOINTED AND HIS TASK— To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn. To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called Trees of righteousness. The planting of the Lord, that He might be glorified.—Isa. 61:2 and 3.

WHEN DREAMS CRASH

A 25-year-old girl, teacher in the public schools at Champaign, Ill., killed herself with a rifle the other day, leaving for her parents a note in which she said that she was committing suicide because her life had been a failure. Since she had an excellent record as a teacher, and was popular with all her associates, her parents quite naturally could not understand why she felt that she had failed.

This matter of failure is entirely relative. The extent of your failure depends largely on the extent of the vision with which you begin to work. If you only aspire to become a compete truck driver, for instance, you will be overjoyed when you actually get such a job. But if you aspire to become a bank president or a grand opera star the truck driver's job, if you land in it, will seem very mean and unsatisfying.

Aspirations usually rise high at the beginning. A youngster can put together a dream that takes in the entire earth. Nothing is more touching than the sublime confidence with which youth builds its air castles. A girl who hopes to be a singer is sure that she will outshine Galli Curci and Homer. A boy who plans an army career knows he will eventually look on Napoleon and Lee as equals.

Yet the realization, almost always, falls leagues short of the goal. In every city and town there are forgotten, submerged men and women who once, far in the past had a glimpse of sunlit heights and broad living. Indeed all of us, to some extent are in that class. Who has not tucked away in the back of his mind a youthful vision ... which now is quite faded and dead?

But most of us do not give way to despair and end our lives. We keep at it, doing what we are forced to do instead of what we would like to do, keeping our faded dreams as private secrets which we can inspect once in a while but we know are only keepsakes of an earlier day.

How do we manage it? Why does not the sense of failure overcome us, as it did this girl school teacher, and drive us to desperation?

Probably it is because we come to realize, as we gain experience in living, that such a dream or vision is an end in itself. It has a value of its own, even if it is never translated into accomplishment. It is worth something to have had a look at the promised land, even if we never quite get there. Examining our long-lost youthful aspirations we can say:

"Here, once, at any rate I got a glimpse of what life might be. And because I know its possibilities, even if I haven't attained them I know that ... significant and I know ... I am not made entirely of the dust. If I have to live in the valleys I at least know that there are hilltops where fresh winds ripple the grass and the trees ... down in the ..."

THE BIRTHPLACE OF AVIATION

A granite boulder has just been unveiled at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, marking the birthplace of aviation where Orville Wright, the first man to fly successfully, performed this historic deed.

Formerly the world used to pay its warmest tributes to the great generals who fought successful wars. Today it is giving its warmest applause to the statesmen and scientists who promote human welfare. At the battlefield, man celebrates how he beat down his brothers but at this historic spot in North Carolina he celebrates how he made nature his servant for the good of all.

Peaks of Desire

by Kane O'Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, reporter, falls in love with Ann Tremaine, wealthy debutante. He takes her to live at his boarding house, and introduces her to a new world. She is attracted to Steve Harrison, a husky young mechanic of whom Jerry is jealous. Ann gets a job in a small theatre owned by Nick Pagalos and later asks her employer to hire Steve. One night Pagalos makes love to Ann, and in the battle which ensues between him and Steve the Greek is made to realize his error. That night Steve confesses his love to Ann, and they embrace. Steve leaves his job to go into the trucking business. In the meantime Jerry Dunn returns from a trip and tells Ann he is no longer heartbroken over her. While they are chatting Maizie Thompson, an ex-sweetheart of Steve's appears. She accuses Ann of having stolen Steve from her. Ann denies this, and Steve who has come in, says that he is no longer in love with Maizie. Maizie breaks into sobs and Ann and Steve leave her to be soothed by Jerry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

JERRY walked out into the hall with Steve and Ann. With the door closed behind them they agreed to leave the stricken girl in his charge. All fluency of speech had left Steve. "Me, I'm going to bed," he said dumbly and started up the stairs.

"If you're too sympathetic with her you'll only encourage her in her ... f," Ann told him. "The ... thing. I feel sorry for her ... but you being a man it's natural ... you more. Be good to her, Jerry, but don't take her too seriously."

He was back in the room with Maizie and once they were alone together some soothing radiations of his sympathy began to quiet her. He turned out several lights until there was only the yellowish glow of a reading lamp on his table. Maizie sat up, straightened her hair and looked at him.

"You're a great guy," she said.

"Don't you ever believe it!" he smiled.

"You're a great guy and a good sport," she insisted intently. "You think I can't read between the lines? I know how that Ann stands with you. You're dippy about her, ain't you?"

Jerry's face became serious. "Do you mind if I tell you something very personal?" he asked.

"Shoot."

"Don't say 'ain't.' It's bad grammar. Don't say 'ain't you'— say 'aren't you.' You're too nice a girl to use such untidy language."

"You're smart, ain't—aren't you. You don't kid me any. This Ann, you are up to your neck in love with her and you don't ... about it. It kind ... you to see her falling for Steve, don't it?"

"All right, you school teacher. ..."

live in a world of romance and I suspect you get your ideas out of the movies. Why don't you come down to earth and find yourself?"

He found himself wondering how she would look in a trim, narrow tailored suit of the darkest blue—so dark that it was almost black. He could see her with a slick little cloche hat on her head, with the best of silk stockings and nice shoes. Not so much rouge, not so much mascara about the eyes—his mind played with the idea of a possible transformation. As long as she didn't speak and reveal her crudity it would be possible for her to get by almost any place. Behind her facade of hardness he could discern faintly the hint of a rather fragile and appealing charm. It was so easy to become romantic about girls and wonder what they really were like.

"What do you mean, find myself?" Maizie demanded. "You mean why I don't be like HER?"

"Oh, no. You're a different type. I imagine you think too much about being in love. Aren't there plenty of other things you can do?"

"Good God—plenty of things I can do!" Maizie laughed bitterly. "Listen, do you know I work eight hours every day in a canning factory? On my feet. What did you think I was doing—going around to afternoon teas like some society dame? ... I ain't suffering from any lack of employment."

"Do you live at home?"

"Yeah."

"Say yes."

"Yes. Say, are you trying to give me language lessons or what?"

"Steve said you're going around with a pretty bad bunch of people. What did he mean by that?"

The narrow shoulders drew up in a shrug. "Oh, just boys and girls that hang around dance ... places ... A lot of girls are pretty ... but I ... I'm old-fashioned. It's not a thing to brag about and I guess ... but I hap...

dunno. It was a pretty hot crowd."

"And you cut them out for Steve?"

"Absolutely."

"Why?"

"I dunno. I guess because I thought he was better than the rest of them. I thought he was right."

Jerry forgot for the moment her cheap finery and the frizzy hair. Indeed he saw her not at all physically but was able to sense her futile strugglings with life. Feebly she was like a weed trying to be a flower. There was no use deceiving himself about her—humanly speaking she was still a weed. Perhaps, after a time, she would abandon the struggle and become reconciled to the common lot of her ...

"It's done me a lot of good to talk to you," she said. "Me and another girl met some refined guys once before. They was college fellows but they got pretty fresh later on."

"I'm not going to get fresh with you," Jerry assured her.

"I know you're not. You ain't thinking about me at all—you're thinking about that other girl, that Ann. I guess she's a good scout at that in her own way. All the same, I'm glad I met you ... somehow I don't feel quite as bad as I did."

Her company ... surprising, was strangely agreeable. Jerry found himself actually interested in her. He glanced at her eyes and noted that the hardness had disappeared from them: she was uneducated, but there was somewhere within her a native intelligence.

"You ought to get Steve out of your mind," he told her. "I don't believe in giving good advice because it almost never works—but in your case it might help a bit if you'd try to take a tip. I don't mean you should go back to your old rowdy gang, but you'll only make yourself ridiculous if you bother about Steve. That's the surest way on earth to drive a man away from you."

"I used to admire him a lot," Maizie said thoughtfully.

"You'd better forget that part of it, too."

"I ... to admire him a lot," she repeated. "But I don't admire him as much as I did. You have a lot more stuff on the ball than Steve ever had or ever will have. At the same time, I don't think I could ... a guy like you like I could Steve."

...

"I couldn't love you ... much as I could a guy like Steve ..."

C. A. C. FACES HARD CONTEST ON FIRST DAY

Ilion, N. Y., Basketball Squad Will Be Locals' Opponents Tuesday Night.

New Year's night the C. A. C. basketball team will again be opposed by a team that will no doubt try the locals' metal to the utmost when they take the floor against the basketball team representing Ilion, New York.

Without doubt the Ilion squad will be a real attraction due to the fact that the team is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Ilon and is on tour of the eastern and central states as a medium of advertising for the city of Ilon which is the home of the Remington Arms Works, the Remington Typewriter Co., the Remington Cash Register Co. and many other Remington products. Therefore it necessarily follows that a basketball team representing such widely known products would have the ability to hold up the reputation of the products represented. The team is made up of ex-college players of merit and will no doubt present an exhibition worth seeing.

The C. A. C. squad feels yet the sting of defeat from Bliss College and has been hard at it getting into shape to retrieve some of its lost laurels.

The athletic club is at quite an expense in bringing this big attraction to Circleville and hopes for a capacity crowd.

And especially does the C. A. C. invite the local Chamber of Commerce to attend the game in a body and by its presence and cooperation add moral support to the fighting spirit of the C. A. C. quintet.

THEATRES

ROGERS IS STARRED

"Someone to Love," Charles (Buddy) Rogers' second starring picture for Paramount, will open at the Metropolitan theater Tuesday for a two days' run. This picture is winning instant success wherever it is shown and is reported to surpass in some respects the enjoyable love drama of college life, "Varsity," which opened Rogers' starring career.

Mary Brian, the leading lady of "Varsity," plays opposite the star again in this story of a music store salesman who falls in love with a wealthy girl and turns his talents and attentions to building up a failing girls' school. His efforts in this direction meet with success and he wins the girl as a result.

In "Varsity," the famous comedian Chester Conklin, had an important part and, in "Someone to Love," Rogers has the support of two other well-known comedians, Jack Oakie, who won instant success with Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In!" and William Austin, the great Character Englishman. James Kirkwood, the dramatic actor, is cast in this production.

"STREETS OF SHANGHAI"

Pauline Stark and Kenneth Harlan are starred at the Grand theater tonight in "Streets of Shanghai." It is an interesting and dramatic tale laid in the fascinating and mysterious city of Shanghai. It is the love idyll of a handsome Leatherneck and a pretty American teacher. A Universal comedy will also be shown.

MANY VISIT NEW GARAGE IN CITY

Few country people left Circleville Saturday without viewing the new building of the Harden-Stevenson Co., and walking into the specious show room to get a glimpse of the new Chevrolet Six, which is displayed for the first time in Circleville.

The show room Saturday was packed with those interested in automobiles.

The crowds have been so large that the show room and the new cars will be on display New Year's day. The garage will be open all day.

This garage, recently completed and officially opened Saturday, is one of the best and finest equipped garages in the county.

During the opening and the displaying of the new cars, cigars were presented to the men and the ladies were given sweet peas.

BIG RUSH STAGED FOR LICENSE TAGS

As Mayor Hedges feared about everyone and his brother waited until the last minute to get his auto license plates for 1929. The result was that Monday morning the roadside near the mayor's office had the appearance of a parking space for a park. Those waiting until the last minute were lined up at the door and a doorman was needed to control the crowd.

TRAP SHOOT JAN. 1

In the Friday issue of The Herald there was an error concerning a trap shoot. This should have read, The Circleville Gun club instead of the Laurelville Gun club will hold a New Year's shoot Jan. 1, 1929, starting at 12:30 p. m. There will be 15 ten target events. The prizes to be given will be in the form of sugar and gold. Three traps will be used. One will be operated for the practice by amateurs.

THE FIRST "BANK OF THE UNITED STATES

The first great national bank, called the "Bank of the United States" was established at Philadelphia in 1791, having branches in the leading cities. At that time a national bank was the subject of discussion, as the people believed that the government should have nothing to do with the banking business.

Conscientious planning and expert supervision result in ceremonies unmarred by any neglected detail. Our attendants are trained in thoroughness.

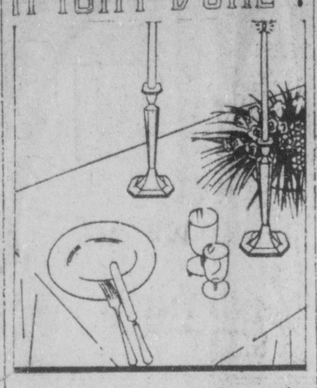
IT ISN'T DONE!



Can you detect in the above setting the error in taste or etiquette? If not, read on —

AFTER you have finished using your sterling silver knife and fork for the meat course, they should be very carefully placed on the plate, both pieces of sterling lying together at a slight angle in reference to the edge of the table, the handles out, the prong tips of the fork and the tip of the knife at approximately the center of the plate. The fork is placed first, nearest the table edge, then the knife with the blade edge toward the fork.

Fashions

Moire Metalized and Modernized, Goes South—Curtainment of Ruffles.

By FRANCES PAGET
Copyright, 1928, by Women's Wear Magazine.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31— Fashion's tendency to revert to fabrics of the stand alone type is still apparent. There are however, many women who prefer to cling to chiffons, or perhaps one had better say have chiffons cling to them.

A resume of several of the collections designed and destined for southern use inclines one to the impression that women are fighting hard to retain the slim silhouette. While they are led far afield in some instances, there is generally a curtailment of ruffles and extra inches in the width of the average dress.

Moire one of the most substantial silks, for this stately fabric is invariably included in the smartest collections. Because Moire has finally been treated like a contemporary it is beginning a career for itself. Instead of making the error of keeping Moire an old-world fabric employed in styles that have so much the feeling of an old-time costume, that women feel out of the modern picture when they wear them, designers have at last created Moire gowns in the modernistic manner.

May the sorrows that will come to You and Me in 1929 weigh lightly on us and only magnify the more the blessings that surely will be ours too.

At least, our hope for you, a full measure, heaped up, of gladness. When needed, just a tinge of sadness to make a perfect blended 1929.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)
